

Daniel Ontaneda, MD, MSc
Assistant Professor Medicine/Neurology
Cleveland Clinic Lerner
Case Western Reserve University College of Medicine
Cleveland, Ohio, USA

Daniel Ontaneda, MD, MSc, is an assistant professor of Neurology/Medicine at the Cleveland Clinic Lerner College of Medicine of Case Western Reserve University and a staff member at the Cleveland Clinic Neurological Institute's Mellen Center for Multiple Sclerosis.

Dr. Ontaneda is the lead principal investigator for a large international multicenter study examining early highly effective versus escalation approaches in multiple sclerosis (DELIVER-MS). He is also the Principal investigator for the Central vein Study in MS , a multi-center trial examining the role of central vein in the diagnosis of MS. He is also a member of the Executive Steering Committee for the North American Imaging in Multiple Sclerosis Cooperative. . Dr. Ontaneda is a member of the Multiple Sclerosis Functional Composite Task Force. Dr. Ontaneda's research is funded by National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Institutes of Health, Race to Erase Foundation, and Patient Centered Outcomes Research Institute. Dr. Ontaneda was the recipient of a Sylvia Lawry NMSS clinical Fellowship Award, NIH KL2 Cleveland CTSA career transition award. He was elected Teacher of the Year in the Neurology Department at Cleveland Clinic in 2017. Dr. Ontaneda is a reviewer for several medical journals, including Neurology, International Journal of Multiple Sclerosis Care, Lancet Neurology, Lancet, and Multiple Sclerosis Journal.

Dr. Ontaneda received his doctor of medicine from the Pontificia Universidad Católica del Ecuador and his master of science from Case Western Reserve University. He completed a postdoctoral research fellowship at Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas. He then completed his neurology residency and a neuroimmunology fellowship at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation.